PIC received an award for the best corporate responsibility initiative in the Middle East in the 2018 Oil, Gas, Refining and Petrochemicals Competition for its GO GREEN initiative. The award was received by the acting Manager of Communications and Services, Mr. Dawood Al-Amiri, who represented the company during a special ceremony held in Dubai on 12 September, and attended by more than 200 people representing a distinguished elite of officials from major oil companies from around the world. The Award enjoys an excellent reputation globally, as winners are among the best performing organizations in 10 different categories, including community responsibility, HSE, training, projects, services, etc... while major companies in oil, gas, refining and petrochemical industries in the region are nominated for these awards that consider a recognition of excellence in these areas. The jury of five judges from the largest companies specialized in oil and gas sector from around the world, scrutinize the competitors for each of the categories of the ten awards, and then select the winners. Commenting on this latest PIC's achievement, CEO Mohammed Abdullatif Al-Farhoud said that the company continues its efforts for many years in supporting, sponsoring and launching many initiatives and social, health and environmental activities, not only for its employees, but also for the surrounding community, to confirm its commitment to its responsibility towards the local society. It has registered many achievements in this field throughout the years of its work, and has won many local and international awards. He added: "We are proud of PIC's pioneering journey, which extends over more than half a century, during which it has registered many achievements at all the levels, and has become a leader in its field. Our company spares no efforts to enhance its role in community service and serve our dear country Kuwait, as well as contributing to push the economic and social development, side by side to instill the long-cherished values of the Kuwaiti people, hoping to achieve more efforts that contribute to the sustainable development of society.
